

1948

2014

1. The organization, functions and methods of operation of the principal components of CIA, with particular reference to foreign operations.
2. The number, type and quality of personnel actually employed and planned for each component, and a discussion of recruitment procedures and problems.
3. The present status of and future plans for coordination between CIA and departmental intelligence agencies, with particular reference to the adequacy of intelligence coverage and reporting and the elimination of unnecessary duplication.
4. The major points at issue between CIA and all or any of the departmental intelligence agencies.
5. The present status of and future plans for intelligence coverage of the USSR, its satellites and world-wide Communist activities, with particular reference to diplomatic and war plans, war potential, atomic energy development.
6. The relative adequacy of intelligence coverage and reporting in the political, cultural, ⁴socialological, economic, ³scientific, ⁵military, ²naval and ¹air intelligence fields.